Endoscopy equipment is sensitive and expensive. Selecting the right endoscope cleaning brush is critical to ensure safe and effective cleaning.

For example, using slightly oversized brushes bend the bristles over, essentially eliminating mechanical abrasion. Brushes with too small a diameter fail to come into firm contact with the cleaning surface, leaving contaminants behind.

Only perfectly sized brushes adequately remove debris and guarantee optimum endoscopy function. Wire ends on channel brushes have plastic tips to prevent endoscope damage.

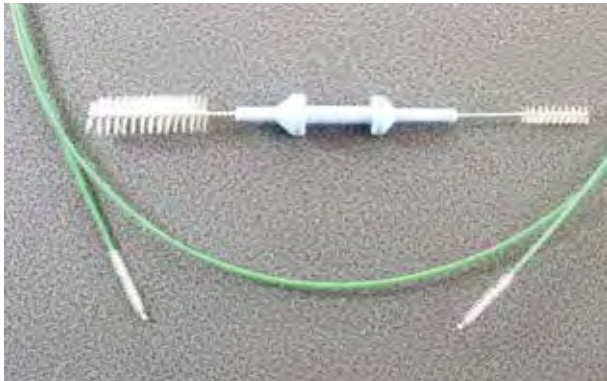

All brushes are supplied individually packed, non-sterile.
